StockX Removes Claims that Sneakers are Authentic

Cheyenne Falcon | Nov 10, 2022

In the midst of an ongoing legal battle with Nike, StockX has removed claims from their product page that identifies sneakers as "Authentic." The resale giant was called out by Nike earlier this year for their unreliable authentication process. Nike alleged that StockX's "99.95% authentication accuracy rate" is a baseless claim and the Swoosh even purchased four fake pairs from the consignment platform to prove it.

Fees still too high imo (I only have ~750 sales tho). Inflation/cost of living is simply higher right now, products are more expensive, & that would certainly help sellers while still being mutually beneficial for you... Presumably higher selling volume vs selling via competitors.

Thank you for contacting StockX support in regards to your recent purchase for the Nike SB Dunk Low Pro Why So Sad? (SIZE: 9.5). I am sorry to hear that you are unsatisfied with your purchase. My name is Jordan and I'll be sure to provide you with as much assistance regarding your concern.

First and foremost, I would like to apologize for your recent Buying experience. It is always our intention to create a seamless order experience for our users and I apologize for any frustration that this purchase may have caused you!

After taking a closer look at your photos, I went ahead and contacted our authentication team for further review of this item to ensure we can get this resolved as soon as possible.

Once our team reviewed the photos provided, it was determined that your Nike SB Dunk Low Pro Why So Sad does meet our deadstock conditions. The issue that you are referring to has been a consistent manufacturing variance throughout the production of this item. Additionally, we do allow for items to be tried on for fitment as they would in a retail shop, and this variance could also be a result of that.

We understand that you are not completely satisfied with your purchase and I truly apologize for any frustration this may have caused you. These items have been manufactured in a factory, and as a result may feature natural flaws due to mass production which falls within our conditions guidelines.

While I understand that you are not completely satisfied with this purchase, we, unfortunately, do not have control over the manufacturer's production standards and must work with products that they have cleared for release.

Your recent order for the Jordan 1 Retro High OG Chicago Lost and Found (TD) didn't make it through our multi-step verification process. As a result, we have canceled your order and have issued a full refund. It should hit your account in the next 3-5 business days.
